

Area Networking and Development Initiatives - ANANDI

Established in 1995, ANANDI has been working with rural poor women in Gujarat, with a strong emphasis on collective processes and a rights-based framework. The organisation focuses on a holistic and integrated development approach which empowers women by building their collectives and promoting leadership; addressing their health, safety and security; and creating an environment conducive to a dignified life with equal participation.

- ANANDI enabled and empowered women's collectives, women farmers and their FPOs to realise human rights and climate-resilient environmentally sustainable development through food security, social security, livelihoods and resource rights of the vulnerable communities in 40 villages of Ghoghamba block of Panchmahaals district, Gujarat; building a cadre of 80 women leader.

EdelGive is supporting the programme by focussing on 'Empowering women farmers to realise food and livelihood security with dignity', through increased access to livelihood opportunities, existing government schemes, and by building capacities for gender-just sustainable agricultural practices and strengthening farmer producer organisations.

- Strengthening livelihoods of 1,500 women farmers and 500 members of the Organic producers of Ratanmahal Mandli
